AN ARMISTICE CONDITION.
IMMEDIATE RELEASE OF ALL BRITISH PRISONERS.
London, Oct. 30.
Sir George Cave, the Home Secretary, stated in the House of Commons that the immediate release of all British prisoners would form an essential and primary condition of the Armistice.
He foreshadowed the publication of another terrible White Book, detailing further atrocities.

CRUEL ILL-TREATMENT OF BRITISH PRISONERS.
SIR GEORGE CAVE'S STRONG INDICTMENT.
London, Oct. 29.
In the House of Commons, during a discussion on the treatment of prisoners of war, Sir George Cave, the Home Secretary, in the course of a very strong indictment, said it was proved that the Germans had systematically, under cover, robbed, cruelly mistreated, beat, and even tortured our prisoners. The conditions in some camps were unspeakable and they continued today. No words could be too strong to characterise the dastardly treatment of the men working in the salt mines, libraries, etc. Prisoners were well employed under fire, despite the two pledges given by Germany. Cruelties, ill-treatment and insults were even prevalent in hospitals. Both doctors and nurses were guilty of malpractices. Germany had a debt to pay and ought to be made to pay it. (Loud cheers.)

As regards reprisals, Sir George Cave suggested that one means was through the Germans' great regard for the position, dignity and comfort of their officers and wealthier civilians.

HUNGARY SEETHING WITH REVOLUTION.
MACHINE-GUNS AGAINST DEMONSTRATORS AT BUDAPEST.
London, Oct. 30.
Swiss reports state that revolution is seething in Hungary. A hundred thousand demonstrators at Budapest in favour of Count Karolyi and peace, and the abolition of the German alliance, suffered casualties by rifle fire and machine-guns, while attempting to reach Archbishop Joseph's Palace.

Martial law has been proclaimed at Budapest. Count Karolyi has not been appointed Premier, because the King does not accept his programme which includes the complete independence of Hungary.

KAISER'S ABDICATION URGED.
London, Oct. 30.
There have been renewed rumours of the Kaiser's impending abdication. Much significance is attached to the fact that the Frankfurter Zeitung, one of the most responsible newspapers in Germany, is now urging this course.

AUSTRALIA DEMANDS ON INDENITY.
Melbourne, Oct. 29.
The Australian Commonwealth has issued a statement, stating that the Government of Australia will not be satisfied unless Germany surrenders unconditionally and recognises the rights of the Allies.

The statement also states that the Government of Australia will not be satisfied unless Germany surrenders unconditionally and recognises the rights of the Allies.

THE COMING PEACE.
GERMANY MUST SURRENDER HER SWORD.
Paris, Oct. 29.
The opinion in Paris is that the submission of the Emperor Charles is considered the break-up of the Austro-Hungarian Empire, which consists of a number of disaffected races, each preparing to quit partnership. The Sovereign is deserted and the historic Triple Alliance is smashed. The fate of the separate nationalities cannot be decided until a general peace.

Count Andrusy, son of the statesman who signed the first Triple Alliance Treaty, now signs the death Count Andrusy cannot pretend to speak in the name of the nationalities, whose independence he admitted. There will be peace only when Germany has surrendered her sword.—Havas.

THE ITALIAN FRONT.
ATTACK ON 15-MILE FRONT.
45 AUSTRIAN DIVISIONS OPPOSE ADVANCE.
London, Oct. 29.
Reuter's Agency learns that the British and Italian Armies, attacking on a front of 25 miles, are opposed by 45 Austrian Divisions, comprising 600,000 troops.

The Allies have crossed the Piave on the whole front from the Treviso-Ortovo Railway to Val-de-Bridene, and have made an average advance of over four miles.
The Italian Command considers the battle is going splendidly. All the objectives have been gained.

AUSTRIAN REPORT.
London, Oct. 30.
A wireless Austrian official report states:—
On the battle-front we evacuated the sectors most strongly attacked.

ALLIES CAPTURE 25,000 AUSTRIANS.
Lyon, Oct. 28.
In Italy the Allies' offensive is developing with full success. Cavalry, supported by motor machine-guns, are pursuing the Austrians.
The Allies' advance exceeds 25 kilometres, and they have taken 25,000 prisoners and 200 guns. French Wireless.

THE BALKANS.
ADVANCE OF YUGO-SLAVS IN MONTENEGRO.
SERBIAN ADVANCE TOWARDS HERZEGOVINA.
London, Oct. 30.
A French Eastern communication states:—
23. Serbians have reached the front of the Montenegrins, from which they have taken 10,000 prisoners and 100 guns. Making several hundred miles of advance.

The advance of the Serbians is being followed by the French and British forces. The Serbians are making a rapid advance towards the front.

FIELD-MARSHAL SIR DOUGLAS HAIG

AN AMERICAN APPRECIATION.

One of the ablest soldiers the war has produced does not speak for himself, or about himself. He praises others, and is slow to censure. Sometimes his Government has failed to send him reinforcements when his need of them was sore; but he has not complained. In more than four years of war he has always been at the front, engaged with rare respite in what may be called intensive fighting, often of the most desperate character. The wonder is that he has gone through the ordeal with a sound brain and strength apparently unimpaired. There have been three commanders of the French Armies since mid-December, 1918, but only one commander of the British.

Has any other soldier in history been exposed to a greater strain upon his faculties than Sir Douglas Haig has endured and triumphed over in the last three years less three months? Yet he is known to him by Americans, and by most of his countrymen, for that matter, is that his name figures a good deal in headlines. It is impossible to dissociate him from the British Army. On September 10 Field-Marshal Haig in an order of the day thanked it for its valour and devotion.

"The capture of 75,000 prisoners and 750 guns in the course of four weeks' fighting speaks for the magnitude of your efforts and the magnitude of your achievement."

For once D. Haig, so he signs his name, showed more emotion than was ever wrung from him before by success or failure. "We have passed through many dark days," he said in the address to his troops. "Please God, these never will return."

This great soldier, for such he is, took to a little Presbyterian Church behind his lines every Sunday morning, and when he spoke the name of God, which is seldom, let his pipe seem conspicuous in his hand. One of those dark days was April 12 of the present year, when the British Army was fighting for its life in the Ypres sector, when it had been so much, but always undauntedly, Sir Douglas Haig ordered his men to "Back to the Wall," and of that day, in which he and his staff, accompanied by some of the fighting men, were in the front line.

Many among us are tired. To show I would not let this victory go, I have written the words which have been the motto of the British Army in the last three years. "Back to the Wall," and of that day, in which he and his staff, accompanied by some of the fighting men, were in the front line.

WHAT HE HAS DONE.

What has Sir Douglas Haig not done in his four years and more in France? He has accomplished and inspired, soldier should do? With Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien, his fellow corps commander, he more than once saved the British Army on its retreat from Mons. The historian, Major Ernest W. Hamilton, says that one hundred Victoria Crosses were earned on that glorious retreat for every one given. One-third of the expeditionary army sleep the long sleep in France.

Smith-Dorrien, whose health broke down under the strain, and Haig, the man of iron, vied with each other in fighting rearguard actions until flesh and blood could endure no more. The escape of remnants of brigades bordered on the miraculous. "We shall have to hold on here for a while if we all die for it," said Sir Douglas Haig on one desperate occasion. The British Army was always holding on; every extraction from the German envelopment was like a forlorn hope. Smith-Dorrien, he of the eagle eye and massive jaw, was never himself again. Sir Douglas Haig, who did not take life so tragically, lived through many dark days with gleams of glory.

The first Ypres battle was as tough and as a business as anything experienced in the retreat from Mons. The 7th Division, 12,000 strong when it left England, lost 835 officers and 40,000 and 9,604 men. On the darkest day, when all seemed lost, down the Menin road galloped Sir Douglas Haig and his staff, escorted by the 17th Lancers, shells falling thick about them, to encourage the faltering troops—the no other reason, the General's place being behind the line. On another day it was at Gheluvelt—his sword on a road in consultation with Sir John French, who had given an order for the Army to fall back, when a courier rode up to say that the Germans were retreating. Sir Douglas Haig, as a British soldier, had shown a Norfolk Englishman's sense of duty. He had turned the tide of battle. So critical was all the Ypres fighting, so suddenly did attacks of success pierce the pall of defeat, that it was not until the end of the war that Sir Douglas Haig was able to say: "I have never known a more successful campaign than the Ypres campaign."

Sir Douglas Haig was Sir John French's right arm, and when the veteran retired the Government, in naming the Scotchman for supreme command, reflected the mood of the Army. Upon the battle of the Somme, which he fought himself with French and with great troops, Sir Douglas Haig's name will remain forever the name of the British Army's greatest battle. It was the last time that the object of the war was so clearly defined. The army had to be reorganised. The army had to be reorganised. The army had to be reorganised.

The British Army, under the leadership of Sir Douglas Haig, has shown a remarkable ability to adapt itself to the changing circumstances of the war. It has shown a remarkable ability to adapt itself to the changing circumstances of the war. It has shown a remarkable ability to adapt itself to the changing circumstances of the war.

the German offensive which was to end the war. There were more dark days for a British Army overwhelmed by numbers. The "Back to the Wall" order held its ranks inviolable.

PERSONALITY.

This Scotch gentleman, son of Mr. John Haig of Ramornie, in Fife, who commanded 2,000,000 British and Colonial troops, is in the prime of life at 57. "tall, lithe, well built," a consummate horseman, fair of complexion, blue of eye, in manner gracious, reserved, but kindly. "I have rarely seen a masculine face so handsome and yet so strong," says one who tried to interview him. He shuns publicity. An industrious student of the profession of arms, it is said that he never commanded a larger body of men than a regiment in battle before the great war. The influence of the genial Duke of Cambridge secured him a commission after he had been rejected for defective eyesight. Sir John French saved him from drowning in the Mersey River in the Boer War. "Lucky," Haig, he has always been called. He predicted the war with Germany in a letter to Field-Marshal Sir Evelyn Wood years ago. He has refused a peerage, but is a Knight of the Order of the Thistle. He has owed much to his aristocratic connections, but infinitely more to the virtues of his race and to inherent soldierly qualities. He has a keen sense of humour. He is never visibly angry. Born in the purple and a favourite at Court and Mayfair, he is a "soldier's soldier." There are many Haigs on the British Army List, but only one Sir Douglas. Modest and indifferent to fame, he will be reckoned among the great commanders of the greatest war in history.
